

As part of multistate projects, scientists at land-grant universities are working together to improve management, trade, and marketing strategies for aquaculture and capture fisheries.